The accuracy of this session may be questionable as I had a fever and chills during it and had trouble focusing enough to distinguish between true data and AOL.

The site location for "the activity of interest at the date time place of interest" is sketched on page 2. The cue "activity" elicited a feeling of motion down a long, narrow corridor and was accompanied by the concepts "hesitation" and "destination." Associated with the activity, again, was a word sounding like "cross-train" or "cranston."

The cue "present-time- current related activities" elicited a clanging, chinging sound "like" (AOL) the sound of an old fashioned steam-driven train. It also elicited the image of a very large open area similar to a huge open field.

The cue "current related activities at original site-present time) elicited the image of something rectangular in shape with wires and circular raised dots on it. In addition, there was a sound "like" a typewriter and a table with a dark, box shaped thing on it.
